HENEY SHOT

Ruef denounced the attempted assassination most vehemently.

"I cannot," he said, "find language strong enough to denounce the attempt to kill Heney."

Even before Heney had been removed from the courtroom, Captain Duke took Haas in charge and after informing him that whatever he might say would be used against him, began to interrogate him, the statement of the ex-convict being taken down in shorthand.

Haas was convicted for embezzlement in San Bernardino county and on May 25, 1888, was sentenced to three years in San Quentin. He served two years and eight months, having earned four months by good behavior and was released January 25, 1890. Some years later he was married and has a wife and four children. He lived with his family at 1848 McAllister street and was engaged in the saloon business at the time he was drawn on the jury panel for the second trial of Ruef last May. After being passed by both sides, Heney learned that he was an ex-convict. He dramatically confronted Haas with his picture in convict stripes, closely cropped hair, and a number across his breast. Haas was forced to admit his penitentiary record and was immediately discharged from the jury. From his statement it appears he has been brooding over his exposure ever since that day and has nursed a deep hatred of Heney, which culminated in today's tragedy.

Judge Lawlor reconvened court at 3:15. He had already sent the jury to the St. Francis Hotel in charge of deputy sheriffs. As soon as a semblance of order was restored, Ruef who had been at liberty on bonds of $1,500,000 was remanded in custody of sheriff and he was soon afterwards taken to the county jail. His counsel, Ach and Dozier, offered formal objections to the action of the court. Dozier then demanded that Gallagher, a witness, be also ordered into custody of the sheriff until his cross examination had been finished. This was refused by the court.

The action of Judge Lawlor in ordering Ruef in custody, it is said, is not so much for fear that he will endeavor to flee, as for his own safety from possible mob violence. It is evidently feared that some demonstration would be made against the would-be assassin, the police removed him tonight from the city prison and it could not be learned whether he had been taken.

"I'll live to prosecute that man," declared Heney, on the operating table at the Central Emergency Hospital while the surgeons were probing his wound. The wounded man is entirely conscious and grittily enduring the ordeal. Mrs. Heney arrived at the hospital a few minutes after her husband had been taken there and later accompanied him to Lane hospital, where she is at his bedside tonight. After an informal consultation, Drs. Terry, Moffit and Bunnell announced at 9 o'clock tonight that the patient is resting easy and that at 11 o'clock doctors would determine whether to use an X-ray or probe for the bullet. The bullet entered the right cheek and passed through the head underneath the brain cavity, finding lodgment in the region of the left ear.

The Associated Press was the first to receive and send out the news of the attempted assassination, being even the first to give it to the local papers. So great was the interest in the case that the Associated Press office was soon deluged with inquiries not only from all parts of the city, but by telephone and telegraph from all sections of the state.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Nov. 13.—The crime for which Haas was convicted was embezzlement from Schlessinger & Green, cigar merchants of San Francisco. On July 27, 1887, he collected from H. J. Wild, San Bernardino, a cigar dealer, $279 due that firm, appropriating the money to his own use. He disappeared for nearly a year when he was arrested in Philadelphia and brought back to California. He did not deny collecting the money, but claimed he was entitled to the use of the money for expenses. This Schlessinger denied. Haas was bound over and in the superior court pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three years' imprisonment in San Quentin. Haas said: My name is Morris Haas. I shot Heney. He ruined my life. Heney pronounced his own death sentence when he denounced me in court. I have no business at all since that time. It was an outrage of Heney to do that. I am a wronged man, not Heney. People ostracized me; they would not even look at me any more. Heney had no right to do that. My conviction and serving in the penitentiary was a public record. Why didn't he look at that?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The first information received at the White House tonight in regard to the attempted assassination of Heney was through the Associated Press. No statement in this connection was given out tonight.

JOLLY LETTER FROM DR. B. OWENS ADAIR

DESCRIBES JOURNEY TO EMPIRE CITY AND OREGON'S COMING MONTE CARLO

Warrenton, Or., Nov. 13, 1908.

"Editor Astorian:—You asked me for a report of my trip to the Empire City. Here are a few brief notes: I left Portland at 8:45 p. m., reached Drain 2:30. Took the four-horse stage at 5:30 a. m. "A traveling man began, at once, to tell me what a fearful trip was ahead of us. I laughed at the very idea. 'Well,' said he, 'you will see the worst road you ever saw in your life.' 'Oh, nonsense,' I replied, 'you don't know what you are talking about. My mother went over this road when she was 87 and lived over it. You just wait till February or March and then you might have something to worry about. I really expect to make this a pleasure trip; and to me it was."

"Everybody was accommodating and the hotel accommodations were excellent. The Southern Pacific has staked out most of its right of way from Drain to Scotsburg and has done a great deal of substantial work in the way of bridging, tunneling, grading, etc. There are thousands of ties and bridge timbers piled along the road for future use.

"We reached Elkton at 11 a. m. for dinner (16 miles). "Changed horses and were soon off for Scotsburg, 20 miles away, where we arrived at 5:30. We drove on the only street of that old, dirty, sleepy town, to the new clean hotel at the boat landing. The hotel had been a saloon, but when the town went dry it changed its name and occupation. It now feeds the inner man with good well-cooked food, instead of dealing out 'hell and damnation.' The barroom is used for an office and reception room. Everything seemed to have been left just as it had been, except that which had been intended to quench the thirst, but in reality to increase it. Even the saloonkeeper himself was now our polite and accommodating landlord.

"After a most delicious supper of creamed chicken and other good things we boarded the steamer Eva for a 20-mile ride down the Umpqua to Gardner. The land on which Gardner is built was, in 1855, owned by A. C. Gibbs, later, Governor of Oregon. It had but one house at that time. He was succeeded by J. C. Cooper, who owned the steamer Columbia which ran between Scotsburg and Portland, requiring two weeks to make the trip. In those days Scotsburg was the common center for all Southern Oregon. Mr. Burns was her pioneer customs collector.

"In 1864 the first sawmill was built in Gardner. Seven years later it was bought by A. M. Simpson. Later it was passed to the Gardner Mill Co. which has made it one of the most important milling and logging plants on the coast. Members of that company who were young men worked in the logging camp at $40 per month are now millionaires. With one exception every house in Gardner is painted white and this with the beautiful back-ground and broad placid waterfront, makes a picture of beauty. She might be likened to a seagull nestling with outstretched wings up under those evergreen hills. Everything is life and bustle in this little clean city.

"We tarried here till after dinner; then boarded the Eva for the mouth of the Umpqua, nine miles below, where we found the stage waiting for us on the beach. The day was perfect and the 20-mile ride was most charming. The recent storm had left its effect on the surf. I never before saw the breakers so wild and beautiful. About half way we came to a ship, high and dry far up on the sand. The driver stopped and we all jumped out and climbed up on deck of the ship and came back with souvenirs. We reached the landing opposite Empire at 5:30 and found two gasoline launches in waiting, one for North Bend and Marshfield, the other for Empire. "Empire was once a beautiful and thriving city, but as it is owned principally by millionaires who live in New York city, it has been allowed to decay, while Marshfield and North Bend have forged ahead. Notwithstanding their disadvantage of location. There are some admirable people in Empire, most of whom I met and enjoyed during my short stay. My nephew, Mr. Hanson, arranged to take me to see Mr. Louis Simpson's (that is to be) great resort of the northwest. It is whispered that it is to be the second Monte Carlo of the world. Mr. Simpson is the son of the millionaire mill and lumber man. He is a fine handsome young man. It was he who built up North Bend. And he has bought a strip of land along the coast, south of Empire, which contains hundreds of acres. He has cleared a wide strip along the county road for an electric line. He has planked three miles where his road leaves the county road. It is claimed that he has spent several hundred thousand dollars on this project. He has cleared and ploughed some 20 or 30 acres of ground which is to be laid out in an artistic garden after some English pattern.

"He has built a fine large house fronting both to and from the ocean; a large barn where he keeps his driving harness and five race horses. A fine electric plant run by water power, which lights the house, barn and grounds. He is also building a race-track. The house is built on a high cliff of solid rock not more than 25 or 30 feet from the brink. This is certainly a spot of beauty and grandeur, such as I never saw before. I was reminded as I stood on the brink of that wonderful abyss, listening to the roar of those mighty billows as they came rushing on and on only to beat themselves into froth and fury against that solid perpendicular wall of those poor crazed victims who, after losing their all, had rushed out and jumped over the cliff at Monte Carlo. There could be no better place than this for the last leap. The body would be ground into atoms, as are the shells of the deep, which are being cast upon the sands, and are now being utilized for beautifying the driveways and pathways around and through the grounds.

"I prophesy that if this young man gets his hands upon his father's millions he will make himself famous as the originator of one of the greatest resorts of the world. "DR. B. OWENS-ADAIR."

TARIFF ON TOBACCO IS SATISFACTORY

REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRATS APPEAR CONTENT WITH PRESENT RATES

GOVERNMENT IS JUSTIFIED

Democrats Hold That Government is Entitled to the Revenue and Republicans Favor it Because of the Protection Obtained.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—From the attitude assumed by both republican and democratic members of the house committee on ways and means today became evident that there is general satisfaction with the present duties on tobacco and tobacco manufacturers. Democrats appear content with the present high tariff on the ground that tobacco is a product on which the government should derive a revenue while the republicans favor the present rates because they offer the protection desired by the American tobacco interests.

Bilious Troubles

Bile causes no end of trouble. Sick headaches, bilious attacks, jaundice, constipation and many distressing ailments arise from an excess of bile, or from obstruction of the bile duct. Inactivity, sedentary occupations and indiscretion in feeding and drinking are bile blunders that need to be guarded against. When the liver is disordered the best bile correctives are
